

Stillaguamish Discretionary Fund Rebate Program

Accepting Applications

Rebates available now for clean water projects

If you're a landowner in the former Stillaguamish Clean Water District, Snohomish County Surface Water Management is offering rebates for projects which protect water from bacterial pollution.

The Stillaguamish Discretionary Fund Rebate Program aims to enhance water quality in the Stillaguamish Watershed by increasing community awareness and inspiring landowners to complete projects that protect and restore water quality for the benefit of all. Up to $25,000 in rebate funding is available per property for landowners willing to improve local surface or groundwater.

Example Eligible Projects

- Riparian buffer planting
- Livestock exclusion fencing
- Roof runoff management systems
- Off-channel livestock watering system
- Livestock stream crossings
- Heavy use areas
- Livestock manure removal
- Manure storage /composting system
- Education and outreach projects*

*Education and outreach projects have a maximum reimbursement of $15,000.

Steps To Participate:

1. Read the rebate program guidelines and review eligibility criteria.
2. Submit an application for your project. Partners like the Snohomish Conservation District can help
3. Upon approval, complete your project.
4. Turn in paperwork for your completed project. Once your project receives final inspection and approval, a rebate will be mailed to you.
